

Center for
Security Policy
Studies

“North Korea and the Nuclear Future”

Friday, September 29 4:30pm Hazel Hall Room 120

With the threat to “reduce the U.S. mainland into ashes and darkness”, is North Korea the primary national security concern for America?

Mark Fitzpatrick, current Executive Director of International Institute for Strategic Studies-Americas (IISS-Americas) and head of the IISS Non-Proliferation and Nuclear Policy Program, will be joining us to discuss the current nuclear state of North Korea and what it means to United States national security.

RSVP to mfay2@gmu.edu

Curious about CSPPS? Visit us at csps.gmu.edu