

Deadline Extension

Eleventh Annual Southeast Regional Graduate Student Conference

Call for Papers

Otherness and Unheard Narratives

The Florida State University History Graduate Student Organization is pleased to announce the eleventh annual Southeast Regional Graduate Student Conference. The event will be held on Friday April 3, 2020 on FSU's campus.

Our theme this year is "Otherness and Unheard Narratives." We are interested in papers that explore notions of alienation, silencing, and discrimination. Our hope is to explore narratives from under researched areas or familiar narratives told from unusual or unexpected angles. While we are particularly interested in these themes, the committee also welcomes papers from any thematic, chronological and geographic perspective.

Graduate students at any level in the humanities and social sciences are encouraged to participate in this collegial environment. Our conference offers an opportunity for first- or second-year students to explore a conference setting, meet fellow graduate students, and visit a new department. Advanced students will find fertile ground for testing their ideas and receiving feedback from peers and senior academics. We hope you will join us.

The extended deadline for applications is January 22, 2020

We accept both complete panels and individual papers. Individual submissions should include a 300-word (or less) abstract, and a curriculum vitae. Panel proposals should include a 200-word description of the panel's topic as well as the individual abstracts and vitae

Please email all submissions to Southeastregionalgrad@gmail.com

The conference committee is excited to announce Assistant Professor of History at Loyola University Maryland, Andrew Ross as the keynote speaker. Professor Ross is a specialist in the history of sexuality and the author of Public City/Public Sex: Homosexuality, Prostitution, and Urban Culture in Nineteenth-Century Paris, published in 2019. He will give a talk about using the archives for exploring the history of sexuality, as well as an overview of his latest research.
